

P6UHGraO

1 UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
2 SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK
-----x

3 AUBREY DRAKE GRAHAM,
4
5 Plaintiff,

6 v.

25 Civ. 399 (JAV)

7 UMG RECORDINGS, INC.,

ORAL ARGUMENT

8 Defendant.
9 -----x

New York, N.Y.
June 30, 2025
2:00 p.m.

10
11 Before:

12 HON. JEANNETTE A. VARGAS,

13 District Judge
14

15 APPEARANCES

16 WILLKIE FARR & GALLAGHER LLP
17 Attorneys for Plaintiff
18 BY: MICHAEL GOTTLIEB
BRADY SULLIVAN
ANNA GOTFRYD

19 SIDLEY AUSTIN LLP
20 Attorneys for Defendant
21 By: ROLLIN RANSOM
NICHOLAS CROWELL
22 KATELIN EVERSON
JAMES HORNER
23
24
25

P6UHGraO

(Case called)

MR. GOTTLIEB: Good afternoon, your Honor. Mike Gottlieb, from Willkie Farr & Gallagher, on behalf of plaintiff. With me at counsel table are Brady Sullivan and Anna Gotfryd.

MR. RANSOM: Good afternoon, your Honor. Rollin Ransom, from Sidley Austin, on behalf of defendant UMG. And with me today from Sidley are Nicholas Crowell, Katelin Everson, and James Horner.

THE COURT: Good afternoon, everyone.

We are here today to hear oral argument on defendant UMG Recordings' motion to dismiss the complaint filed by Aubrey Graham, popularly known as Drake. So let me outline how I'd like to proceed this afternoon.

Since this is UMG's motion, they're going to argue first, and then I'll hear from plaintiff's counsel, and then I'll allow UMG to have a rebuttal. For the sake of the court reporter, I would appreciate if counsel would speak at the podium today.

I do want to let everyone know that I have reviewed the amended complaint, the documents that were the subject of the request for judicial notice, and the parties' memorandum of law. So you should assume in your arguments my familiarity with of those materials and the arguments of the parties.

To preview for you my specific concerns and what it

P6UHGraO

1 would be most helpful for the Court for you to focus on, there 2 are a few issues that I would predominantly like to hear from 3 the counsel on today:

4 The first of those is whether or not I can make a 5 legal determination at this stage in the proceedings as to 6 whether or not the statements challenged as defamatory in 7 Kendrick Lamar's lyrics are fact or opinion;

8 Second, if it is appropriate for me to resolve that on 9 a motion to dismiss, whether and to what extent I should 10 consider the documents submitted by defendants in their request 11 for judicial notice in making that determination; and 12 Finally, applying the New York Steinhilber factors, 13 are the challenged statements fact or opinion within the 14 meaning of New York defamation law and the New York State 15 Constitution?

16 With that preview of the Court's particular concerns, 17 counsel, you may proceed.

18 MR. RANSOM: Thank you very much, your Honor, and 19 thank you for the guidance, which is helpful.

20 I will focus my comments on Drake's defamation claim, 21 although I would like to address the other two claims as well, 22 and I'll focus on our primary argument which is also the 23 subject of the Court's questions, which is that the statements 24 at issue constitute non-actionable opinion rather than 25 statements of fact. And to frame it, including in light of the

P6UHGraO

1 Court's questions, I want to start with a critical observation,
2 which is that under binding New York law, that issue, the fact 3 versus opinion issue, is a question of law solely for the 4 Court. It is solely for the Court to decide as an issue of 5 law, which we believe makes it particularly suitable for a 6 determination on a motion to dismiss, and we see—and I will 7 address—a number of cases dismissing claims on this basis.
8 And it is amazing to me that not once in Drake's 27-page brief
9 does Drake acknowledge that this is, in fact, an issue of law
10 for the Court rather than a factual issue to be determined by a 11 jury.

12 THE COURT: Well, let me stop you there, because you 13 are correct that there are a number of cases where courts have 14 decided this on a motion to dismiss. The New York Court of 15 Appeals in Brian is one such case. But then, subsequently, 16 following Brian, New York Court of Appeals had Davis v.
17 Boeheim, which was in the context of a motion to dismiss and 18 relied quite heavily on the early procedural posture of that 19 case in finding—or holding—that the standard that applied at 20 a motion to dismiss stage was whether or not the 21 communications, taken in their ordinary meaning and context, 22 are susceptible to a defamatory connotation, and suggested that 23 if they were, and that if they could be taken in such a light, 24 then the motion to dismiss should not be granted and discovery 25 should proceed, which strikes me as being somewhat in tension

P6UHGraO

1 with the Court's prior decision in Brian, which, as you have 2 observed in your brief, did permit a motion to dismiss because 3 it is an objective standard. It's a reasonable listener
4 standard, a question of law, and applied a somewhat different 5 articulation of the test as to would the reasonable listener
6 have understood the allegedly defamatory comment as opinion 7 versus fact.

8 So I would like you to address that tension between 9 those two cases. How do I reconcile them when I have to apply 10 New York law?

11 MR. RANSOM: Of course. Your Honor, two things about 12 Davis v. Boeheim, the first, including the way the Court 13 characterized it, the issue of whether a particular statement 14 is susceptible to a defamatory connotation is a distinct 15 element of the defamation claim from the question of whether it 16 is fact or opinion. And I recognize that, on that 17 issue—whether a statement is susceptible to a defamatory 18 connotation—there are cases that suggest that where there's a 19 dispute as to whether statements could have a defamatory 20 connotation or not, might go to the jury. That is treated 21 distinctly from fact versus opinion, and in fact, we see that 22 distinction in Goldfarb, the case that Drake primarily relies 23 upon and which, as we pointed out in our reply, they 24 misapprehend on this point, because the Court considers 25 separately and distinctly the question of defamatory

P6UHGraO

1 connotation, on the one hand, and fact versus opinion, on the 2 other. And as to fact versus opinion, the Court expressly 3 notes that that is a pure question of law.

4 The second observation—

5 THE COURT: That is true, but I do want to press back 6 on your reading of Davis, because Davis also does consider the 7 opinion versus fact distinction and says that they cannot state
8 as, a matter of law, that the statements are pure opinion 9 because there's a reasonable view of the claims that have been 10 asserted in the complaint, and that the court has to take that 11 reasonable view in light of the—in favor of the plaintiffs at 12 the motion to dismiss stage and, therefore, decides not to 13 dismiss it.

14 So, although, yes, they also discussed the defamatory 15 context, there is a portion of that opinion that is focused on 16 the opinion versus fact distinction, which is the one raised by 17 the defendants in this motion.

18 MR. RANSOM: And I do think, in that respect, there's 19 a slight conflation, even in Davis. That said, Davis continues 20 to apply the Steinhilber test, including the consideration of 21 the four—sometimes collapsed as three—elements of determining 22 fact versus opinion. And I think what's, ultimately, critical 23 about Davis gets to the Court's final question of those that it 24 laid out, which is, is this fact versus opinion? And what was 25 critical in Davis was the court's ultimate conclusion that the

P6UHGraO

1 nature of the statements in Davis strongly suggested that the 2 speaker had undisclosed information underlying his statements
3 that would lead a person to conclude that they were statements 4 of fact.

5 And as you walk through the ultimate conclusion of 6 Davis, in determining that it survived a motion to dismiss on 7 the fact versus opinion issue, it was ultimately driven, I
8 submit, in its entirety, by the Court's conclusion that there 9 were multiple factors that would lead a listener to believe 10 that the speaker there had undisclosed information unique to 11 him that led him to make the statements that he did. That 12 included his reference to the fact that there was an 13 investigation at the university underlying his conclusion, that 14 his statements came out before the results of that 15 investigation were released, that he had held a position of 16 authority at the university about which he could speak with 17 authority and solemnity, and that the nature of his comments, 18 presented for an article and discourse on the issue were such 19 that they were not rhetorical hyperbole, they were not in 20 extremist or other consequences that lead one to conclude that 21 they are likely to be statements of opinion. So that was the 22 ultimate conclusion reached by the Court, and we have none of 23 that here—none of the context, none of the indicia that 24 suggests a thoughtful statement of fact based upon some weighty 25 investigation as to which the speaker is privileged.

P6UHGraO

1 And I'll address that in greater detail. But I think 2 it's critical, even under Davis, which continues to articulate 3 and apply the Steinhilber factors, to emphasize that context is 4 key. In Steinhilber, here are the words: "Even apparent 5 statements of fact may assume the characteristic of statements 6 of opinion when made in public debate, heated labor dispute, or 7 circumstances in which an audience may anticipate the use of 8 epithets, fiery rhetoric, or hyperbole." Steinhilber was 40 9 years before its time. Epithets, fiery rhetoric, or 10 hyperbole—it might as well have said "statements in a rap 11 battle." And even Steinhilber and the subsequent cases, 12 including Davis, and as exemplified in Davis, recognize that 13 that contextual assessment of the context in which the 14 statements are made often, ultimately, determines whether one 15 would perceive these as fact versus opinion. And that's what 16 was found in Davis, because of the context in which those 17 statements were made. And, on the other hand, in Steinhilber, 18 because of the context the statements were made in Steinhilber, 19 the Court affirmed a motion to dismiss, dismissing the 20 complaint as a matter of law, concluding that, although the 21 statements may be perceived as factual, the context in which 22 they were made would lead a reasonable observer to conclude 23 that they were pure opinion, including because of the heated 24 nature of the communication.

25 THE COURT: Since you bring up context, isn't the

P6UHGraO

1 logical import of your argument that statements made in either
2 a rap battle or diss track, therefore, are categorically 3 opinion? Isn't that the logical conclusion of what you are 4 saying? And is that a fair reading of New York case law that 5 the—where the New York courts have said forum is not 6 necessarily dispositive? But it does seem to me that you are 7 arguing that forum, here, is dispositive; a rap diss track just 8 can't be taken as fact.

9 MR. RANSOM: Your Honor, the cases that say forum is 10 not dispositive, I don't dispute that proposition as a general 11 proposition. It's typically raised in the context, for 12 example, of an op-ed page or a letter to the editor, where the 13 context would tend to suggest one of opinion, but the courts 14 say it's not dispositive. And I suppose, in those 15 circumstances, that it's theoretically possible that the nature 16 of the communication, even in what is otherwise thought to be 17 an advocacy piece with heated rhetoric, may support a finding 18 of fact versus opinion.

19 Whether a diss track in a rap battle could ever cross 20 the line from opinion into fact is an interesting question. I 21 would submit that the nature of the art is that that is, at 22 most, highly unlikely and may categorically be the case that it
23 doesn't. But what we're dealing with are the facts in the case
24 here, and what we can see and what we can look at on the facts
25 here is that the nature of the lyrics clearly convey the sort

P6UHGraO

1 of rhetorical hyperbole, over-the-top trash-talking extremists 2 that, using the language of the Court of Appeal in New York and 3 the federal courts applying it here in the Southern District of 4 New York, are clear and, we submit, dispositive indicia of 5 rhetorical hyperbole and opinion rather than fact. And you can 6 see that more pointedly in cases that are closer to this than 7 those that offer the reservation about the forum in which the 8 statement is made.

9 So, in Hobbs v. Imus, for example—again, affirming 10 the grant of a motion to dismiss—the Court relies on the fact 11 that these are shock jocks, and it's not just the limited 12 statement in which the alleged defamatory communications are 13 made. The Court relies upon their notorious history and the 14 nature of shock jock journalism from these speakers in 15 particular as supporting its conclusion, on a motion to 16 dismiss, that the context tells you that these are statements 17 of opinion. And it acknowledges, that if you just look at the 18 statements taken in isolation, one could argue that they have 19 the indicia of fact, but when you look at the shock jock 20 context, the Court ultimately concludes the claim must be 21 dismissed.

22 In Rapaport—

23 THE COURT: Again, let me press you on this. The 24 context here is the rap diss battle, and we're here on a motion 25 to dismiss. When I'm considering that context, don't I need to

P6UHGraO

1 know more about whether the ordinary listener of—and maybe
2 there's a question as to who the ordinary listener. Is it 3 someone who doesn't follow rap music and is just hearing it on 4 a radio? Is it someone who's actually immersed in the 5 community and that type of music and has that background?
6 Those are questions that we could also discuss—but with 7 respect to the context on a motion to dismiss, how can I say 8 that the ordinary listener would—comparing this now to the 9 shock jobs. Shock jobs say shocking things — how do I, 10 sitting here as a judge, know that the ordinary listener of a 11 rap diss track would also have that same underlying assumption?

12 Isn't it true, for example, that sometimes accusations
13 are made in rap battles that are true and turn out to be true?
14 And maybe listeners have that understanding. And, sitting 15 here, as a matter of law, can I say that they would not? Do I 16 need to have more discovery—potentially experts, potentially 17 more context, for this particular rap battle or rap battles 18 writ large—before I can make such a judgment as a matter of 19 law?

20 MR. RANSOM: There's no suggestion in any of the cases 21 that this is the subject of, for example, expert testimony or 22 otherwise. What the Court is required to do under the 23 standard, as articulated in both the New York State and federal 24 cases, is to look at the material before it and reach that 25 determination based on its evaluation of the statements and the

P6UHGraO

1 surrounding context. And we can again look to an example in 2 Torain v. Liu, and in Torain v. Liu—again, resolved on a 3 motion to dismiss—the Court did take into account the context.
4 And I do want to address the Court's question about whether it
5 can look at this material at this stage because I think Torain
6 is particularly probative of that point.

7 But the Court looks at the information and makes an 8 assessment on its own. It did the same thing in Rapaport.
9 Now, admittedly, Rapaport was a summary judgment motion, but it 10 illustrates the nature of the information the Court is to 11 consider in reaching that determination, which is the language 12 used and the broader context in which it is provided. That's 13 the universe of the material it looks at, and then it comes to 14 a judgment.

15 THE COURT: But if the broader context—which is what 16 we're talking about—is, perhaps, a specialized world, then 17 perhaps the Court does need more information than is in the 18 four corners of the complaint, and even in the request for 19 judicial notice, to understand that context and correctly apply 20 the legal tests. Do I have enough facts about that broader 21 context to come to a decision about what a reasonable listener
22 would conclude, whether or not the statements made in the song 23 are to be taken as fact or opinion?

24 MR. RANSOM: Your Honor, again, what the cases do is 25 look strictly at the material that's presented, including the

P6UHGraO

1 context that's provided. You do have additional information, 2 certainly, in the form of the amicus brief that was provided in 3 support of our motion, but also from the complaint itself. And 4 what is interesting and notable in this case is that the 5 complaint not only includes the allegations but it cites and 6 references the fact of the rap battle, articles describing the 7 rap battle, articles describing the context of the rap battle 8 and the history between these particular artist, including the 9 rumors, innuendo, and controversies that have surrounded Drake 10 with respect to his relations with underage women for an 11 extended period of time. The context is provided there.

12 There's no suggestion in the case law that the Court 13 needs to limit itself to a particular type of individual, a 14 particular type of listener, or that every listener has perfect 15 knowledge of all the information surrounding it. That would 16 turn an objective test into a subjective test that's dependent 17 on individual particular listeners with very specific 18 information, and none of the cases suggest that that is 19 required. In fact, all of the cases that talk about this issue 20 posit that the information is generally available and 21 considers, with that information that is available, what would 22 the objective listener reasonably understand.

23 And on the question of what the Court may consider and 24 evaluate, again, we look at Torain in particular. Here's a 25 case where the speaker made a statement and the plaintiff

P6UHGraO

1 disputed whether or not the Court could consider the 2 surrounding context, including earlier statements by the 3 plaintiff that prompted the defendant to make the challenged 4 remarks. In footnote 1 of the circuit opinion—it's also in 5 footnote 1 of the district court opinion—the Court says:

6 "Torain, the plaintiff, contends the district court 7 improperly considered the statements that he made during his 8 war of words because they were not included in his complaint.
9 That argument fails. As noted above, in determining whether a 10 statement is actionable, the Court should look to the overall 11 context in which the assertions were made and determine on that 12 basis whether the reasonable listener would have believed that 13 the challenged statements were conveying facts about the 14 libeled plaintiff. Torain himself introduced this context in 15 his complaint, noting that he was engaged in a war of words 16 with a rival disc jockey."

17 That's exactly what we have here. Drake's complaint 18 identifies the rap beef, identifies a number of the tracks in 19 the rap beef, and then cites countless articles describing and 20 discussing the rap beef and all of its context. And all of 21 that is properly before the Court and may properly be 22 considered by the Court in connection with a motion to dismiss.
23 And I think what's critical is that it includes, for example, 24 Drake's own statement in "Taylor Made Freestyle" in which he 25 specifically said and prompted to Kendrick Lamar, referring to

P6UHGraO

1 himself in the third person, "Talk about him likin young girls;
2 that's a gift from me." So when Kendrick Lamar then raps, 3 "Hey, Drake, I hear you like 'em young," there's no secret or 4 surprise or mystery of the context in which that statement is 5 made. Again, these lyrics, this context, is all properly 6 before the Court, including because of the way the complaint is 7 pled and the abundant references not only to the lyrics 8 themselves and the beef itself but also to articles that 9 provide the context to the Court that allows it to make the 10 determination that it needs to make.

11 I'd like to briefly address what seems to be the 12 primary argument that was raised by Drake, although I think not 13 necessarily specifically raised by the Court, but in the event
14 there's a question, there is heavy reliance on online
15 statements made after "Not Like Us" came out, which Drake says 16 suggests that members of the public believed that these were 17 statements of fact rather than opinion. And this argument is 18 wrong for so many reasons. It misstates the standard because, 19 again, you don't look at the subjective views of individuals.
20 It is an objective test based upon the reasonable listener. So 21 it doesn't matter what 10 or 20 or 40 or 60 people say, because 22 that just reflects subjective views. And that's even before 23 you get to the substance of the reviews, which themselves 24 reflect this rhetorical hyperbole, not to mention emojis, and 25 misspellings, profanity, and even racism and anti-Semitic

P6UHGraO

1 remarks. Nothing of that informs the objective standard the 2 Court is to apply.

3 Second, it ignores the fact that this exact same 4 argument was raised and rejected in Rapaport, directly at the 5 district court, where evidence was submitted of all of these 6 statements of people, after the diss track was released by 7 Barstool, challenging Rapaport, and Rapaport argued this shows 8 that people thought it was fact. And the Court rejected that 9 argument, and the Second Circuit affirmed. And it ignores 10 Drake's own statement, Drake's own statement—which we've 11 attached as Exhibit A to the request for judicial notice—about 12 the pernicious danger of relying on statements in rap tracks 13 and rap lyrics as truth, as evidence of truth, as statements of 14 fact, about the chilling impact on this art form and the 15 chilling impact on artists, and I don't think that can be 16 overlooked. Drake himself took the position that you shouldn't 17 do exactly what he's asking you to do right now. He was right 18 then, and he is wrong now.

19 Finally, on defamation, Drake has also argued that 20 this is somehow mixed opinion, suggesting that somehow Kendrick
21 Lamar is uniquely and privately privy to undisclosed facts
22 about Drake's sexual proclivities. I think just to say it 23 refutes it, but, again, Drake himself goaded Kendrick with 24 "Talk about him likin young girls; that's a gift from me," and 25 Kendrick says, "Hey, I hear you like 'em young," and goes from

P6UHGraO

1 there in "Not Like Us," no suggestion of some hidden, secret
2 information. But, in any event, this is also an issue of law
3 for the Court—

4 THE COURT: But there are lyrics that tend to suggest, 5 as plaintiff points out, that there is information that 6 Mr. Lamar is privy to—the reference to the rabbit holes and 7 other truths that he can tell—that one potentially could read 8 as suggesting that either his statements regarding Drake are 9 based on undisclosed information or that potentially there are 10 other secrets that he has not revealed. There's some ambiguity
11 there, but on a motion to dismiss, I have to read the ambiguity 12 potentially in favor of the plaintiff.

13 MR. RANSOM: And, again, the case law makes clear that 14 that is also an issue of law for the Court, and that the Court 15 is to require—is to consider context in that specific 16 circumstance as well. We see that in Cooper v. Templeton and 17 in Steinhilber itself where the Court says, in evaluating this 18 question of whether there are undisclosed facts, the Court must 19 consider the context. And so, for example, in Woodbridge, the 20 Court says, "Although some of the statements are based on 21 undisclosed, unfavorable facts known to the writer, the 22 disgruntled tone and anonymous posting, among other things, 23 point to opinion," and ultimately concludes, opinion rather 24 than fact.

25 We also see the same thing in Torain, which, although

P6UHGraO

1 it suggested some unknown fact, the Court said, look, I look at 2 the context as a whole, and this heated public statement tells 3 me that, notwithstanding this trash-talking, including about 4 putative undisclosed facts, ultimately, is one of opinion.

5 So, yes, when Kendrick refers to a rabbit hole, that 6 is part of the rhetorical hyperbole throughout "Not Like Us," 7 and the Court must consider that context in evaluating that as 8 well. It's the same way when Drake threatens that Kendrick's
9 darkest secrets are coming to light or that Drake dug up bones 10 in an excavation. That context is part of the nature of the 11 rap battle, and we see that in the amicus brief as well. It 12 does not save Drake's claim here.

13 THE COURT: Let me challenge you on one specific lyric 14 from "Not Like Us," and that's the "Certified Lover Boy?
15 Certified pedophiles." It does suggest, particularly the use 16 of the word "certified"—again, an ambiguous term—but paired, 17 as it is, with "certified pedophile," it could give the 18 listener, a reasonable listener, the impression that in some 19 way there's been some determination that, in some unspecified 20 official way, that Drake is a pedophile. What is your response 21 to that argument?

22 MR. RANSOM: So, two things about that: First is I 23 think it's critical, in considering that particular passage, to 24 pair it to what proceeds it, which the Court quoted, "Certified 25 Lover Boy? Certified pedophiles," referring to Drake and his

P6UHGraO

1 crew. The Certified Lover Boy is the name of a Drake album, 2 and so it is clearly and deliberately a play on those words.
3 And any more than the certification of lover boy status has 4 meaning, the reference to "certified pedophile" is more of the 5 rhetorical hyperbole that we see in this precise context. It 6 also can't—

7 THE COURT: This does bring me back a little bit to my 8 prior question, though, which is, who is the ordinary listener?
9 Is it someone who's going to catch all of those references and 10 all of these nuances between these two artists and the 11 community writ large so that they're going to understand that 12 Drake had a prior album called Certified Lover Boy, and this is 13 a play on the words, or is it the ordinary listener who may not 14 listen to either of these artists with any regularity and may 15 not have that familiarity? Who is the ordinary listener, and 16 how do I apply that test when there's so much specialized and 17 nuance to a lot of these lyrics that does require in-depth 18 analysis to catch all of those references?

19 MR. RANSOM: So, two things, your Honor: One, on that 20 question, all of the cases, at least in the way they apply the 21 law, consider the entirety of the context. They don't slice 22 and dice it down to what a particular listener of all of the 23 context may know and whether every listener knows every piece.
24 In every one of these cases, what the court looks at is the 25 context as a whole, not sliced and diced down to individual

P6UHGraO

1 listeners or assuming that it's limited to just people who 2 actually have specific knowledge of particular pieces of this.

3 The other comment I would make with respect to the 4 concerns regarding nuance or will someone get that is that 5 there is a danger to that approach that is at least warned in 6 Brian v. Richardson—and also in Mann v. Abel, another New York 7 Court of Appeal case—about sifting through communications and 8 picking particular words or phrases out and considering them in 9 isolation. And what Brian v. Richardson says is that is 10 dangerous to do, because rather than sifting through a 11 communication for the purpose of isolating and identifying 12 assertions of fact, the court should look to the overall 13 context in which the assertions were made and determine, on 14 that basis, whether the reasonable reader would have believed 15 that the speaker was conveying statements of fact. We see the 16 same thing in Mann v. Abel, another New York Court of Appeal
17 case. Although one could sift through the article and argue 18 that false factual assertions were made by the author, viewing 19 the content of the article as a whole, as we must, it was 20 protected opinion, and in that case also the claim was 21 rejected.

22 So the notion of trying to look at a particular 23 phrase, tease it out, and not take into account the broader 24 context, the broader context of "Not Like Us" as a whole—"Hey, 25 Drake, I hear you like 'em young," and Drake's statement, "Talk

P6UHGraO

1 about him likin young girls"—and then the broader context of 2 all the rumors and innuendos and controversy surrounding Drake, 3 young women, and girls, I believe, misses the thrust of the 4 cases that drive the Court's decision, particularly Brian and 5 Mann.

6 THE COURT: This brings me to my second question,
7 which is the question for judicial notice, because the rumors, 8 innuendo, etc., are not set forth in the four corners of the 9 complaint, except, perhaps, in some of the exchanges in the 10 song lyrics. But, obviously, the defendants have submitted 11 articles that it wants the Court to take judicial notice of 12 that allude to those rumors. And presumably, for the purpose 13 under Rule 201, it's not necessarily for the truth of those 14 rumors, but that those rumors existed and were present in the 15 world.

16 MR. RANSOM: That is correct. It is not for the truth 17 of the rumors; it is for the fact of their existence and the 18 context that it provides with respect to the statements in "Not 19 Like Us." But as to whether the Court can take judicial 20 notice, the answer is, in that respect, certainly. News
21 articles, well within the scope of judicial notice, as are song 22 lyrics. And that is particularly true here, because of the 23 articles that we are citing and referencing come from Drake's 24 complaint. They are referenced in, cited in, and—some of 25 them—discussed in Drake's complaint. Now, not necessarily the

P6UHGraO

1 rumors portion, but the specific articles themselves are from 2 Drake's complaint. And we cite them, just as Drake did, and in 3 our brief we identify—and in our request for judicial notice
4 we identify—where from the complaint they arise.

5 So this is not a scenario where we are going out and 6 finding third-party material that has not already been brought 7 into this case by Drake in his own pleading. On the contrary, 8 when it comes to the question of rumors and the facts giving 9 rise to the statements that are at issue here, those are 10 included in articles that Drake himself cites and relies upon 11 in his complaint. So we believe the Court could properly take 12 into account news articles under the standard RJN, request for 13 judicial notice, standard. But, particularly in this case, 14 where they are referenced in the complaint and cited in the 15 complaint and relied upon by Drake, we think it's particularly 16 appropriate and the Court is well within its authority to do 17 so, and given the requirement that the Court consider context, 18 we think, respectfully, that the Court is obligated to do so 19 because that context has actually been provided—not just by 20 us, but by Drake in his own complaint.

21 THE COURT: You said you also wanted to address the 22 other causes of action. Let me give you a few minutes in which 23 to do so.

24 MR. RANSOM: Thank you, your Honor. I will be brief.

25 We've, obviously, briefed our challenges—and there

P6UHGraO

1 are many—to both the Section 349 claim and the Penal Code
2 claim. On the 349 claim, we believe that both parties' cases 3 reflect that the information and belief form of pleading that 4 Drake is using is improper, and that's a sufficient basis 5 alone. But I think what's been made clear from the briefing is 6 where that claim also and clearly fails is on the injury 7 element. The New York Court of Appeal has clearly held that 8 standing under 349 requires a direct rather than derivative 9 injury. You can't have the series of steps between the alleged 10 consumer deception and the claimed harm to Drake, and that's 11 exactly what we have here. So many steps between the alleged 12 consumer deception through artificially increasing the number 13 of streams and any impact on Drake, under City of New 14 York v. Smokes-Spirits in the Court of Appeal, the New York 15 Court of Appeal, and Frintzilas in the Second Circuit, that 16 claim clearly fails.

17 On the Penal Code claim, we have multiple arguments, 18 but I think the easiest and first argument is there's simply no
19 private right of action. All of the cases that Drake cites 20 don't grapple with the Sheehy standard from the New York Court 21 of Appeal, which is then rearticulated in Ortiz. And the 22 existence of criminal enforcement mechanisms for that claim 23 really eliminates the prospect of a private right of action.
24 The cases we cite acknowledge the binding Sheehy/Ortiz
25 standard. The cases that Drake cites largely don't and, in

P6UHGraO

1 fact, are based on authority that predates that binding
2 New York Court of Appeals authority. So we think both the 349
3 and Penal Code claim should be dismissed as well.

4 THE COURT: Thank you very much, Mr. Ransom.

5 MR. RANSOM: Thank you.

6 THE COURT: I'll give you an opportunity to argue in 7 rebuttal at the end. Let me hear now from plaintiff's counsel.

8 Mr. Gottlieb, are you going to be presenting argument 9 on behalf of plaintiff?

10 MR. GOTTLIEB: Yes, your Honor.

11 Your Honor, I'd like to start, if I could, with a 12 discussion about the appropriate standard of review because I 13 think it cuts across all of UMG's arguments in this case, and 14 it is important to have a reminder, both from the federal 15 standard and the state standard, of why we're here today.

16 Under binding Second Circuit authority, the Global 17 Network Communications case that we cite in our papers, a 18 complaint may not be dismissed pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6) unless 19 it appears beyond doubt, even when the complaint is liberally 20 construed, that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in 21 support of his claims which would entitle him to relief. Davis 22 v. Boenheim is the only opinion doctrine case cited by either of 23 the parties in this case that remotely touches on the 24 appropriate standard of review at the pleading context for 25 evaluating an opinion defense, and it is utterly devastating to

P6UHGraO

1 UMG's entire argument in this case.

2 As we explain on pages 1 and 7 of our brief, the 3 question on a Rule 12 motion, when considering an opinion 4 doctrine defense, is not what this Court thinks or what 5 Mr. Ransom thinks a reasonable listener should have concluded 6 when it heard the lyrics in question; the question is whether a 7 reasonable listener "could have concluded" that the statements 8 were conveying facts about the plaintiff. Davis v. Boeheim is 9 the controlling authority. There's no other case that either 10 party cited that even purports to interpret the standard at the 11 pleading stage.

12 At page 268 of the opinion, the Davis court explained 13 that, at the pleading stage, we "limit our inquiry to the legal 14 sufficiency of plaintiff's claim without evaluating the 15 'sufficiency of the parties' evidence, as would happen at the 16 summary judgment phase." Davis expressly argued in this case
17 that the Court should reject the plaintiff's interpretation 18 that were contained in the allegations in the complaint, and 19 instead hold, using the objective standard—which we don't 20 dispute applies—that the reasonable reader would be likely to 21 interpret this statement as pure opinion. The Court rejects 22 that—and this is the most important part of the opinion—the 23 Court says:

24 "On a motion to dismiss, we consider whether any 25 reading of the complaint supports the defamation claim. Thus,

P6UHGraO

1 although it may well be that the challenged statements are 2 subject to defendant's interpretation, the motion to dismiss 3 must be denied if the communication at issue, taking the words
4 in the ordinary meaning and context, is also susceptible to a 5 defamatory connotation."

6 Meaning, if it's susceptible to a connotation that 7 it's fact and it's susceptible to a connotation that it's 8 opinion, the plaintiff wins at the motion to dismiss stage.

9 THE COURT: As I asked Mr. Ransom earlier, though, how 10 do I square that with other Court of Appeals decisions, 11 including Brian, which was also a motion to dismiss decision, 12 in which they do not purport to overrule, so therefore remains 13 good law, still cited by New York courts, but did not use this 14 "could" standard, did not say "is susceptible to a defamatory 15 connotation," but says, instead, the question is whether or not 16 it would be understood by a listener as opinion or fact and 17 presents it as a question of law?

18 MR. GOTTLIEB: So, your Honor—

19 THE COURT: I take you that Davis definitely throws a 20 wrench in the argument, but there seems to be some tension.
21 How do I reconcile that tension?

22 MR. GOTTLIEB: So, your Honor, I don't think there's 23 tension. So, first of all, Davis is the subsequent and most 24 recent opinion, so it would be controlling for this purpose.
25 The Brian court doesn't purport to interpret the pleading

P6UHGraO

1 standard. So there was no dispute between the parties as to 2 what the Court's inquiry ought to be in evaluating the 3 pleadings is one point.

4 The second is there's no discussion or suggestion in 5 the Davis—the Brian opinion anywhere that there was a 6 challenge to the actual content of the allegations in the 7 complaint, which is what we had in Davis, and it is what we 8 have here, where you have the defendants essentially saying:
9 Don't credit or believe or draw inferences from the allegations 10 in the complaint in the plaintiff's favor; instead, accept this 11 other evidence that we're presenting to you and draw inferences 12 in order to determine what the appropriate social context is so 13 you can make your decision as a matter of law.

14 In Brian, the only thing that the court considers—at 15 least from what one can tell from reading the opinion—is the 16 four corners of the op-ed that was being considered. The Court 17 was merely analyzing an op-ed and talking generally about what 18 op-eds are. There's no suggestion in Brian that there was an 19 attempt to insert extrinsic evidence into the record. There's 20 no suggestion that there was any challenge to the inferences 21 that the plaintiff was being asked to draw of the complaint, 22 and the Brian court makes clear that, in the text of the 23 article itself, the author made clear that the purpose of the 24 article was to advocate for an independent investigation, and 25 in support of the argument, the defendant marshaled all of the

P6UHGraO

1 relevant materials included within the text of the article. So 2 the Court had, basically, everything it needed in order to 3 analyze both whether it was capable of a defamatory meaning, 4 whether it can be proven true or false, and what the context 5 immediately of the article in the broader social context were.
6 There simply is no indication that there was any dispute before 7 the court as to any of that.

8 In this case, what we have, by contrast, is an express 9 request for judicial notice that I want to address before I get 10 into the sufficiency of our allegations, if I could. That 11 request for judicial notice asks the Court to accept 17 12 exhibits into the record and to use evidence contained in the 13 exhibits to draw inferences that directly attack, contradict, 14 or undermine the allegations in Drake's complaint. Now, there 15 is a time and a place for the weighing of evidence, but that is 16 either at trial or the Rule 56 stage. It is not here. And UMG
17 has no answer whatsoever to the binding Second Circuit 18 authority that we cite at page 14 of our brief, which is the 19 Global Network Communications case, in which the Second Circuit 20 makes clear that the conversion requirement of Rule 12(b) is 21 mandatory, not discretionary. And under that rule—

22 THE COURT: Rule 201 allows me to take judicial notice
23 at any stage of the proceedings. That's explicit in the rule.
24 And, certainly, ample cases take judicial notice in the context
25 of a motion to dismiss. That doesn't convert it to a summary

P6UHGraO

1 judgment motion. By definition, it doesn't, because I am 2 permitted to consider both materials within the four corners of 3 the complaint, matters that are incorporated by reference or 4 that are integral to the complaint, and facts that are 5 judicially noticed through Rule 201. And if I do, then that 6 doesn't convert it to a summary judgment motion.

7 MR. GOTTLIEB: That's correct, your Honor. We don't 8 dispute that. What we dispute is UMG's suggestion that the 9 Court can either use the materials for either the truth of the 10 matter asserted—which they're disclaiming here—but also can 11 use the materials to make factual inferences based on the 12 content of what the Court finds within those exhibits.

13 THE COURT: Well, let's just talk about the song 14 lyrics in the rap battle. There's an argument that they're 15 already incorporated by reference—except, perhaps, one, the 16 "Taylor Made Freestyle," which was notably omitted in the 17 amended complaint by reference—but the others, the other songs
18 in the rap battle, are referenced and linked to their Spotify
19 or—I think it was their Spotify listing. So I'm not even sure 20 that I need to take judicial reference that they're not 21 incorporated by reference into the complaint, but certainly 22 there can't be dispute about what the lyrics are. The lyrics 23 are what they are.

24 MR. GOTTLIEB: So, to make this easy, we don't 25 challenge that the Court can take notice of the fact that

P6UHGraO

1 lyrics exist in a song out in the world. The question is how 2 one interprets those lyrics and what meaning is given to those 3 lyrics in the context of evaluating the rap battle. Similarly, 4 of course, we don't challenge that there was a rap battle. We 5 plead that in our complaint. What we take issue with is UMG
6 using lyrics to draw inferences about what reasonable listeners 7 and reasonable viewers would have understood about the song in 8 question. That is where the argument strays from what is 9 permissible under the Court's judicial notice authority, and it 10 also strays—

11 THE COURT: Once the lyrics are in evidence, then, of 12 course, I can draw inferences from them. They're in evidence.
13 They've been judicially noticed. The lyrics exist. They have 14 the meaning that they have. They're words. And I don't 15 understand your argument that I could take judicial notice of a 16 song lyric, but I'm not allowed to consider what the lyric 17 means or says.

18 MR. GOTTLIEB: Because, at the pleading stage, the 19 Court is not allowed to make inferences against the plaintiff.
20 The Court is required to draw all reasonable factual inferences 21 in plaintiff's favor, and the Court's not allowed to take 22 materials from outside of the complaint and use it to discredit 23 or undermine or question the allegations that have been 24 plausibly alleged in the complaint. And I think this argument 25 around context is—this is an important example. So, for

P6UHGraO

1 example, we have alleged throughout the complaint what the 2 appropriate context for the understanding of the lyrics, the 3 cover art, the video, and the song are. We have alleged that 4 the full context includes the lyrics of the song, the cover 5 art, and the video, and we have explained, in numerous 6 allegations throughout, why a reasonable listener or reader or 7 observer would have interpreted those songs as conveying a 8 singular and precise factual message that Drake—and false 9 message—that Drake is a pedophile.

10 THE COURT: But isn't that a legal argument, that I 11 don't have to draw an inference in your favor? Because whether 12 a reasonable listener would have drawn that inference is a 13 question of law, which you've already agreed is a question of 14 law, and legal assertions or arguments made in a pleading do 15 not have to be credited by the Court.

16 MR. GOTTLIEB: The question, though, is not what a 17 reasonable listener would have interpreted the lyrics to mean; 18 the question is whether a reasonable listener could have 19 interpreted the lyrics to mean—in other words, is it 20 reasonably susceptible to a defamatory connotation? That's the 21 Davis standard, and we think that we have more than adequately 22 alleged that.

23 But, more to the point, we have specific factual
24 allegations in the complaint that UMG engaged in a coordinated, 25 covert, and unlawful scheme to remove "Not Like Us" from the

P6UHGraO

1 rap subgenre and turn into a de facto national anthem. That's 2 alleged at paragraphs 10 and 11 and 128 through 202 of our 3 complaint. The complaint alleges facts showing that UMG wanted 4 to and succeeded in making the song culturally ubiquitous. And 5 this means that the audience—to answer one of the Court's 6 questions to my friend—the audience by which to evaluate 7 defamatory meaning in this case is not the people who would be 8 dialed in to every back-and-forth between Kendrick Lamar and 9 Drake in the rap battle, but the audience is everyone exposed 10 to the lyrics and imagery, not just those sort of there in the 11 moment. We cite the Lindell v. Mail Media case in the Second 12 Circuit that stands for that proposition.

13 This is particularly important because we also allege, 14 with specific numbers, that this song achieved a cultural 15 ubiquity unlike any other hip-hop song in history, not just 16 unlike the other songs in the rap battle, but unlike any other 17 song in history. More than 9 billion streams at the time of 18 the filing of our last brief have been—9 billion times have 19 been streamed on this song. Every other track in this rap
20 battle pales in comparison to that. So the relevant audience
21 member, if the Court is trying to understand the objective 22 listener, objective viewer, cannot be the person who listened 23 to every single track in the rap battle. The relevant person 24 is probably your average 13-year-old who's alleged to be 25 dancing to the song at a bar mitzvah, who may not have heard

P6UHGraO

1 any of these other songs before or may not even be that much of 2 a rap fan.

3 THE COURT: That would be a very interesting bar 4 mitzvah that played that song.

5 MR. GOTTLIEB: That is apparently very popular at bar 6 mitzvahs, your Honor.

7 THE COURT: I'll take your word for it.

8 MR. GOTTLIEB: There's a separate set of factual 9 allegations in the complaint that add to this that UMG also 10 doesn't add, and that's contained at paragraphs 90 through 92
11 of the complaint. We alleged that, in sort of the modern 12 social media environment, allegations of pedophilia are of the 13 far more relevant social context, and whatever might have been 14 true when Judge Daniels with considering these issues in 15 Torain, today, given the massive global audience for this 16 song—that it reached the entire world—and the social media 17 environment in which allegations of pedophilia land, today, 18 audiences are simultaneously primed to believe and primed to 19 react with outrage to allegations of harming children. And 20 that is a direct response to many of the generalizations
21 contained in the cases that UMG cites and many of the arguments 22 they're making. These are specific allegations at 23 paragraphs 90 to 92 of our complaint.

24 UMG is asking you, based on their sort of own spin of 25 exhibits, to disregard these well-pleaded factual allegations

P6UHGraO

1 in the complaint about how—how sort of the world today
2 receives these type of allegations, and we just don't think 3 that can possibly be appropriate at the motion to dismiss 4 phase.

5 THE COURT: Let me go back, because we were addressing 6 the various inferences that can be drawn from the lyrics, and 7 one question I have for you is, do I have to draw an inference 8 from the lyrics? Don't they speak plainly? So, for example, 9 let's go back to the Taylor Freestyle lyric, which is, "Talk 10 about him likin young girls; that's a gift from me," and in the 11 context, with the AI voice of Tupac, it's clearly—one can 12 clearly read it to be a goad from Drake to Kendrick, as part of 13 their back-and-forth in the rap battle, to bring up rumors 14 regarding pedophilia and Drake. I don't know how else one 15 could logically read that. If you have an alternate reading, 16 I'd like to hear it. But I don't think I have to draw an 17 extreme inference to understand what that line is.

18 MR. GOTTLIEB: Well, your Honor—

19 THE COURT: What would be the inference that would be 20 favorable to plaintiff of that line, other than the one that 21 I've just put forward?

22 MR. GOTTLIEB: Because, your Honor, you would have to 23 consider, as Mr. Ransom says, black-letter law and opinion 24 doctrine, you don't slice out a single line or a single 25 statement from a song in order to ascertain its meaning. You

P6UHGraO

1 consider the entire song and the entire lyrics in context.

2 THE COURT: But I'm asking you about this line in this 3 song. How would I read it? You said I can't draw inferences
4 from these song lyrics; I can just consider their existence.
5 But do I have to draw an inference?

6 MR. GOTTLIEB: Yes, you —

7 THE COURT: The words are the words. "Talk about him 8 likin young girls," how else would I read that?

9 MR. GOTTLIEB: Your Honor, I don't understand what 10 legal relevance that has to the question of how a reasonable 11 audience member would have understood the lyrics in "Not Like 12 Us." Before you even get to talking about the lyrics in his 13 prior song, you would have to come to the conclusion that your 14 average listener to "Not Like Us" came into the song with that 15 lyric in mind, had heard that song, had been exposed to it, had 16 understood the lyrics in the same way that your Honor is 17 reading them, and there's simply no basis on which to make that 18 determination at the pleading stage in this case. They may 19 come forward with evidence—

20 THE COURT: Let me have you pause there. I understand 21 that a lot of these cases arise in a very traditional context 22 of a newspaper article or an op-ed or a single communication, 23 but, here, we have songs that are in communication with each 24 other, a dialogue with one another. One artist releases a 25 song, a few hours later another song is released that responds

P6UHGraO

1 to that song, and back and forth. That is the context in which 2 these lyrics arise.

3 So to take "Not Like Us" as the specific example and 4 just to isolate it, isn't that taking it out of the broader 5 context in which it existed? It would almost be like taking a 6 single paragraph out of an op-ed and not looking at the 7 headlines and the remainder of the article. Because you can't 8 look at "Not Like Us" in isolation. It's a response to what's 9 come before.

10 MR. GOTTLIEB: So, your Honor, we're not advocating 11 for the Court to not consider the context, that this song was 12 the penultimate track in a rap battle. That's not our 13 argument. Our argument is this song in particular, both in 14 this rap battle and in the history of music, is different. It 15 is different in ubiquity it achieved, so its audience was 16 different. It was different in the fact that it was 17 immediately understood, in the allegations of our complaint, to 18 contain a precise factual allegation and a single factual 19 allegation, the false allegation that Drake is a pedophile. We 20 allege—

21 THE COURT: At the time Kendrick Lamar released this 22 song, there was no ubiquity, and there was—obviously, he's not 23 a fortune teller. He wasn't going to understand that, at the 24 moment that he released this song, it was going to have eight, 25 9 billion streams, and he would be singing it at the Super

P6UHGraO

1 Bowl. He was releasing it as part of this back and forth that 2 occurred over the matter of days. And isn't that the context
3 in which I need to understand the assertions made, not six 4 months later that millions and billions of people have now 5 listened to it and may not have that understanding, but at the 6 time the statement was made, it was in direct response?

7 And let me give you a hypothetical. If two people are 8 arguing on the street and throwing insults back and forth, and 9 then later on one of them says, "OK. That particular statement 10 was slander. You've defamed me," I'd have to know what the 11 interchange between those two individuals were that were 12 throwing insults to understand the full context in which 13 whatever statement was made.

14 Isn't that comparable here: someone insults, the other 15 person responds with further insults, the other person responds 16 with other insults? How can I just take one of these songs in 17 isolation and apply a completely different standard to it 18 because three months later billions of people have now listened 19 to it?

20 MR. GOTTLIEB: Your Honor, I appreciate the question.
21 I think it stems from a lack of grappling with the—and perhaps 22 due to imprecise briefing on our part—the nature—the role 23 that republication plays in this case. We have alleged in our 24 complaint, I believe in 11 separate paragraphs in the amended 25 complaint, that UMG was responsible for republication of the

P6UHGraO

1 defamatory material. That's paragraphs 13, 21, 120, 121, 157, 2 191, 192, 232, 241, 246, and 266. The standard for 3 republication is that a defamatory statement is republished 4 whenever it is intended to and actually reaches a new audience.
5 That's the New York Court of Appeals decision in 6 Firth v. State.

7 We allege this throughout our complaint. UMG said 8 nothing about it until their reply brief in this case. So we 9 have alleged that UMG took steps at multiple times post-May to 10 republish the material and introduce it to new audiences, and 11 each time it did that, it was liable for that republication.
12 And each time it did that, its knowledge at that point in time 13 becomes relevant. And we have pleaded that knowledge in the 14 complaint, including what it knew in July, what it knew in 15 August based on retraction demand letters that we sent to it, 16 what it knew when it launched the Grammy's campaign, what it 17 knew when it launched the Super Bowl campaign.

18 But, even if you don't agree with us on that, we 19 allege in the complaint, before you get to republication, that 20 the defamatory material includes the song, the cover art—both 21 of which were released on May 4—and the video, and the video 22 was not released until July, two months after the release of 23 the song. And UMG's knowledge at the time that it released the 24 video included all of the information that we have alleged in 25 the complaint, including the attacks on Drake's home in

P6UHGraO

1 Toronto—three separate attacks on his home in Toronto—the 2 attack on his OVO business in London, the fact that users all
3 over the United States were commenting on him being a 4 pedophile, and the fact that Drake had denied, factually, the 5 allegations in "The Heart Part 6." We make all of those 6 allegations in the complaint about UMG's knowledge at the time
7 of the publication of the video, so that's the latest 8 point—that's the earliest or latest. But their knowledge, 9 clearly, at the July point in time, before you even start 10 talking about liability for republication, comes into play.

11 And then, your Honor, with respect to your question 12 before about sort of removing the song from the factual context 13 of the battle and doesn't it sort of have to be understood that 14 way, we have alleged that this song was actually understood as 15 a sort of singular entity because of its cultural ubiquity, and 16 even the exhibits that UMG has put into its requests for 17 judicial notice, they prove this. So, for example, UMG has 18 Exhibit P, which is a podcast transcript that we cite a piece 19 of in the amended complaint. At pages 4—page 4 of that 20 podcast transcript, there is a discussion about how Kendrick is 21 making allegations about Drake: "Some of these things have 22 been fact-checked." And then later on down, one of the 23 commentators says: "I don't know if there's ever been a time 24 when a rap superstar—or two rap superstars are contemporaries 25 and one is accusing the other of pedophilia, like, in the

P6UHGraO

1 loudest possible way." It continues, "Contemporaries, people 2 who are making their record label billions of dollars, right, 3 that doesn't usually happen, and this level of 4 allegation—maybe it should inspire some sort of 5 investigation."

6 Later, on page 5, it says that—one of the 7 commentators says, "It unclear right now if the claims of 8 Kendrick Lamar's domestic abuse are true, but let's talk more 9 about these allegations around Drake. No one has previously 10 called out Drake in this way. Now it's being raised to a more 11 mainstream conversation because it's a hit that Kendrick is 12 making."

13 Your Honor, Exhibit B to UMG's request for judicial 14 notice, page 10, the commentators describe Kendrick Lamar in 15 this song as "indicting Drake for years of rumors and 16 speculation." "Indicting," meaning a specific factual charge 17 being made in a song based on rumors and speculation. Notably, 18 "Not Like Us" doesn't include the rumors and speculation in it.
19 It doesn't talk about any of the underlying rumors that 20 Mr. Ransom was talking about that Drake allegedly had to deal 21 with in his past. It only includes the indictment—the 22 specific charge that he is a certified pedophile—the cover 23 art, which is his actual Toronto home, which, by the way, is 24 also validated by the other exhibit that UMG wants you to take 25 notice of, Exhibit J. Page 4 describes the content of the song

P6UHGraO

1 as "Sex Offense Allegation: "Throughout 'Not Like Us,' 2 Kendrick accuses Drake of having inappropriate sexual 3 relationships with minors. This is also a topic Drake has had 4 to debunk in the past. However, Kendrick doesn't shy away from 5 blowing up the rumors surrounding Drake's personal life with 6 his lyrics."

7 Later down, the predator accusations include the cover
8 art for the track; in fact, an aerial picture of Drake's 9 mansion, allegedly dotted with sex offender location tags.
10 These are their exhibits from commentators interpretating the 11 lyrics of the song contemporaneously, understanding it with a 12 precise meaning that can be fact-checked, that can be proven 13 true or false. So if these things are in the record, we're 14 fine with it, because they all prove that there is a 15 susceptible connotation that can be drawn that the song had a 16 precise meaning.

17 Your Honor, I don't know if the Court—

18 THE COURT: Let me ask you this, though: Your client
19 also in the course of this rap battle leveled accusations
20 against Mr. Lamar as well: That he's not the biological father 21 of his child; that he beats his girlfriend. Are those facts or 22 opinion?

23 MR. GOTTLIEB: Are those—I'm sorry, your Honor?

24 THE COURT: Are they fact or opinion, those lyrics?

25 MR. GOTTLIEB: I don't know that the Court has a

P6UHGraO

1 record sufficient to be able to make that determination because 2 the Court doesn't have the context behind all the different
3 allegations in the song. There isn't a complaint with 250
4 allegations giving meaning to the lyrics. We don't know, was 5 there cover art? We don't know, was there a video? We don't 6 know, was there a singular message? We don't know how people 7 understood it.

8 So that is both a determination that the Court doesn't 9 need to make here, nor is there one that the Court has a record
10 to make here. That could be the subject of questions that, I 11 imagine, UMG will want to get into in discovery in this case, 12 but it is certainly not a reason to find that the pleadings 13 fail to state a claim on which relief can be granted.

14 I don't know if the Court wants me to address the 15 actual malice arguments that have been made.

16 THE COURT: I do not need to hear arguments on the 17 actual malice.

18 MR. GOTTLIEB: OK.

19 THE COURT: If you would like to briefly address the 20 other two causes of action in the complaint, however.

21 MR. GOTTLIEB: Sure. So with respect to the—with 22 respect to the Section 349 claim, your Honor, Mr. Ransom made 23 essentially two arguments. The first is he made an argument 24 about information and belief pleading, and the second is about 25 the injury element. So let me address the information and

P6UHGraO

1 belief pleading.

2 I think this argument just simply misunderstands the 3 nature of the allegations that we make in the complaint, and so 4 we don't think it actually matters whether the Court concludes 5 what the standard on information and belief pleading is. Even 6 under the standard that UMG articulates, we believe our 7 allegations meet that for purposes of Section 349. So we 8 essentially made four arguments that support the underpinning 9 factual allegations of materiality and consumer harm under 10 Section 349. The first argument we've made is that UMG misled 11 streaming consumers by paying or by causing payments to be made 12 to third parties to have bots artificially stream the recording 13 on Spotify to boost streaming numbers, and that's 14 paragraphs 173 to 178 of the amended complaint.

15 Now, UMG says that this is based on information and 16 belief, but the standard here is plausibility under Iqbal and 17 Twombly. And we more than meet that standard for the following 18 reasons: So, under paragraph 174, we allege that fake streams 19 are a huge problem in the music industry, and that UMG hasn't 20 disputed that up to 10 percent of all music streams are false.
21 And in 2021 alone, 1 to 3 billion fake streams across popular 22 music platforms were fraudulent.

23 If that's the only allegation we have, we agree, we'd 24 be in a bad place on information and belief pleading. But we 25 continue that, in paragraph 175, fake and manipulated streams

P6UHGraO

1 are significant problems for Spotify, which invests heavily in 2 their reviews on it. It is a reasonable inference that Spotify
3 would not make heavy investments in a nonexisting problem. We 4 also allege that "Not Like Us" set records on numerous 5 streaming platforms. It was the fastest song ever to reach 6 300 million Spotify streams in just 35 days, which is 7 paragraph 130. And one possible inference of this which we 8 believe the Court must draw at this stage is that this 9 unprecedented rocketing up the streaming chart that UMG was 10 using a technique that is evidently used on 10 percent of all 11 music streams to manipulate stream totals.

12 Now, UMG does not dispute any of the paragraphs from 13 paragraphs 129 to 171, addressing its completely unusual and 14 unprecedented tactics in promoting the popularity of "Not Like 15 Us." That includes things like whitelisting agreements with 16 other parties. All of those allegations I just referenced are 17 the background for the pleadings—for the allegations that UMG 18 describes as "information and belief."

19 That background supplies the context for 20 paragraphs 176 to 178, which are based on three things: One, a 21 popular podcast host who insists that he knew that "Not Like 22 Us" used bots; second are users on social media claiming to be 23 music industry whistleblowers who witnessed the buying of 24 promotion through a digital marketer; and, third, a 25 self-proclaimed retired stream farmer who posted a video in

P6UHGraO

1 which he claimed to show how a streaming bot had UMG and 2 Kendrick Lamar used to boost "Not Like Us" streams in their 3 beef with Drake. These are individuals who purport to have 4 firsthand knowledge. They're included in our complaint, and 5 they are all consistent with the underlying and background
6 allegations that precede it. This is an entirely appropriate 7 allegation on information and belief.

8 And under the authority that we've cited, these are 9 particularly appropriate information-and-belief allegations 10 when you're dealing with a covert scheme where, in order to 11 complete our proof of the claim, we rely upon evidence that is 12 in the possession of the defendant. That is in the authority 13 that we cited, which also cites cases from the Second Circuit 14 on this point.

15 We make three other arguments on this that I'll only 16 mention very briefly. The second is that UMG provided 17 financial incentives to streaming platforms to promote the 18 recording and recommendations playlist and search results, and 19 in particular this is important because it relates to the 20 injury argument, which I'm about to get to. We allege that UMG 21 charged lower than usual license rates in order for Spotify to 22 recommend "Not Like Us." And we allege in paragraphs 180 and 23 183 numerous examples of users who described searching for 24 other music, including searching for Drake's music, and being 25 directed to "Not Like Us," both on the Spotify platform and on

P6UHGraO

1 the Apple platform, and that's quite important in the injury 2 allegation.

3 The last two allegations in this are the pay-for-play
4 Payola allegations at paragraphs 184 to 188 of the complaint 5 and the misleading statements that UMG made about the 6 recording, streaming, and radio successes, while knowing that 7 such success was inflated by its deceptive scheme, and that's 8 paragraphs 130, 154 to 155, and 257 of the amended complaint.
9 All of that is entirely appropriate under any pleading standard 10 when considered in context.

11 The second argument that Mr. Ransom made was about the 12 injury element. Mr. Ransom argues that the injury is too
13 attenuated; there are too many steps in between Drake suffering 14 harm and the alleged harm to consumers. That's simply not the 15 case. So, as I just explained, as we've alleged in 16 paragraphs 180 and 183, the scheme that we have alleged 17 misdirected consumers away from Drake's music as a result of 18 manipulation of the search functions on Spotify and Apple, and 19 the result is that consumers were misled into streaming "Not 20 Like Us" rather than Drake's music. We have also alleged that 21 this caused direct financial harm to Drake, not indirect 22 financial harm to Drake, in paragraph 229 of the complaint, 23 where we explain that reduced streaming rates translates into 24 reduced royalties.

25 So before you get to any argument about—

P6UHGraO

1 THE COURT: Can you just explain to me—and I'll 2 express some ignorance as to how whatever algorithm applies to 3 Apple Music and Spotify work—but how is this either the 4 streaming bots or the pay-for-play related to the notion that 5 if one went on to Spotify and tried to play Drake's music, 6 you'd be redirected to "Not Like Us"? The connection between 7 those two things is not entirely clear to me, and perhaps it's 8 because of my lack of familiarity with how those platforms 9 work.

10 MR. GOTTLIEB: So the streaming and bot farm is 11 distinct from that claim, your Honor. So the streaming 12 and—the streaming fraud allegation was sort of the first set 13 of allegations I listed out. The payment of financial 14 incentives to promote the recording and recommendations in 15 playlists and in search results was the second. Those are 16 contained in separate allegations in the complaint. And the 17 allegation there is that—

18 THE COURT: So then what is the injury with respect to 19 the bot-streaming allegations? What would Drake's injury be?

20 MR. GOTTLIEB: The injury in bot streaming is there is 21 a dilution argument, and there is a sort of 22 streaming-to-get-streaming argument. So the dilution argument 23 is the larger the number of fake streams that exist in the 24 platform, the lower the royalty rate that goes to artists that 25 are not involved in streaming.

P6UHGraO

1 THE COURT: So what you're saying is every single 2 artist on Spotify would have this exact same cause of action
3 against UMG?

4 MR. GOTTLIEB: Yes. And that's entirely consistent
5 with Section 349. In the Northern Auto Mart—Autobahn case 6 that we cite in our papers, along—there's two cases that we 7 cite in our papers on the injury requirement, recognizing that 8 by giving—"any person" is the language of Section 349—by 9 giving any person who is aggrieved by an injury to a consumer 10 standing under Section 349, there's potentially a large number 11 of businesses, particularly in competitive situations, that can 12 bring claims. But those—but the court has held that that was 13 the intent of Section 349.

14 If you give me one minute, your Honor, I'll get the 15 case so I make sure I cite it correctly.

16 THE COURT: Sure.

17 MR. GOTTLIEB: It's the North Shore
18 Autobahn v. Progressive Insurance Group case from 2012. And it 19 explains in the section on direct injury how the statute allows 20 for any person to bring a claim, and the question is whether 21 the business that is asserting the claim suffered an injury as 22 a result of the consumer deception. The claim in the North
23 Shore Autobahn case, as well as in the M.V.B. Collision case 24 that we cite, was essentially that consumers had been deceived 25 or misled by insurance companies in a scheme to take their

P6UHGraO

1 business to other businesses that happened to be competitors.
2 And as a result of those consumers being misled to go to other 3 businesses, North Shore Autobahn suffered harm as a result of 4 having fewer—sort of less foot traffic or less traffic into 5 its business. That's essentially the argument that we're 6 making here. When consumers were misled into—consumers are 7 misled into listening to a song when they're searching for 8 Drake's music, he is injured both directly, but then he's also 9 injured as a result of dilution, because of less compensation
10 that occurs in the formula from Spotify for its artists.

11 Your Honor, with respect to civil harassment, we can 12 rest on our papers and the authorities cited therein, unless 13 the Court has questions for me.

14 THE COURT: That would be great. Thank you.

15 Mr. Ransom, I'll give you a brief period for rebuttal.

16 MR. RANSOM: Thank you very much, your Honor. I will 17 endeavor to be brief. I'm sure you will hold me to it.

18 Let me start, if I could, with Exhibits B, J, and P to 19 our request for judicial notice. Those, again, are articles 20 that are cited in Drake's complaint. And if I heard 21 Mr. Gottlieb correctly, after discussing them, he said these 22 things in the record: "If the Court wants to consider them"—I 23 think this is a quote—"we're fine with it." So I believe that 24 addresses, in large part, one of the Court's first questions as 25 to whether and how it can consider these materials that have

P6UHGraO

1 been submitted. I believe he said the same as to the song
2 lyrics.

3 When I look, for example, at Exhibit P and I think 4 about Mr. Gottlieb's characterization of it, I think it also 5 resonates with the Court's comments that if the Court has these 6 materials in front of it, it can look at them and can look at 7 the entirety of them. So Mr. Gottlieb invoked in Exhibit P the 8 statement, "and some of these things have been fact-checked," 9 suggesting that tended to convey a finding of fact versus 10 opinion. That—

11 THE COURT: Page 4 of Exhibit P?

12 MR. RANSOM: This is page 4 of Exhibit P. And he 13 quoted solely the portion that some of these things have been 14 fact-checked. He failed to read the rest. This illustrates 15 why context is so important. It says: "And some of these 16 things have been fact-checked, like Baka Not Nice, who's a 17 rapper in Drake's crew who was convicted of assaulting a young 18 woman and who was accused of running a prostitution ring."
19 That's the fact-check reference.

20 He also overlooks the fact that this article, which 21 they're fine with the Court considering, in talking about Drake
22 and in talking about the references in "Not Like Us," say 23 things like, these are the speakers' quote: "We all know the 24 stories of him going to girls' basketball games, and it's in 25 our faces. Let's talk more about these allegations"—that's on

P6UHGraO

1 page 4 and page 5: "Let's talk more about these allegations
2 around Drake. Tirhakah, as you mentioned, there are some 3 things we've seen and heard over the years," and then it refers 4 to the discussion—or the history with Millie Bobby Brown and 5 her relationship with Drake when she was 13 and he was 30 or 6 31. So these articles provide the context that the Court can 7 and should consider in our motion to dismiss.

8 So true with respect to the lyrics. And, again, the 9 Court asked the question about "Taylor Made Freestyle," and 10 you're right, it is conspicuous that "Taylor Made Freestyle" is 11 not included in the footnote in Drake's complaint, but it is 12 referenced in these articles that Drake is fine with the Court 13 considering, and there's no real question that it's part of the 14 battle. And, again, I think it speaks to the question of 15 context. Because, yes, I focus on the line "Talk about him 16 likin young girls; that's a gift from me" from Drake, but the 17 context of that is not even limited to that line. And your 18 Honor, I'm going to read it verbatim. Please excuse the 19 profanity. This is the entirety of the statement from Drake:

20 "Kendrick, we need ya, the West Coast savior, 21 engraving your name in some hip-hop history. If you deal with 22 this viciously, you seem a little nervous about all the 23 publicity. Fuck this Canadian light-skin, Dot. We need a 24 no-debated West Coast victory, man. Call him a bitch for me.
25 Talk about him likin young girls; that's a gift from me."

P6UHGraO

1 That's the context in which "Not Like Us" appears.
2 That's the background, that's the history, and that's what 3 clearly conveys this rhetorical hyperbole that what you hear in 4 these rap battles is trash-talking in the extreme and is not 5 and should not be treated as statements of fact.

6 Very briefly, your Honor, Mr. Gottlieb says there's no
7 indication of a dispute in Brian as to the context or 8 connotation of the statements. Brian is a New York Court of 9 Appeals decision. I'm pretty confident there was a dispute in 10 Brian. And if the Court looks at it, the Court reflects that 11 the parties vigorously disputed all issues, but that context 12 was key and that the motion to dismiss was properly granted.

13 Mr. Gottlieb also invokes Global Networks, which is in 14 their brief, albeit not for the point that he cites, and with 15 good reason. On the pleading standard, motion to dismiss 16 standard, Global Networks was effectively overruled by Twombly
17 and Iqbal. So it doesn't actually state the correct standard.

18 Very briefly on the Section 349 claim, I think what 19 the discussion with counsel illustrates is the fundamentally 20 indirect nature of any injury or harm that Drake claims. It 21 requires consumers doing a thing, Spotify doing a thing, 22 royalty streams doing a thing—multiple steps, and that is not 23 what 349 is intended for. It is not intended to permit any 24 person who claims—in this case as Drake does—that they were 25 effectively indirectly impacted by some purported consumer

P6UHGraO

1 deception to bring a claim. That would, frankly, flood and 2 overwhelm the courts in a way that is unsupported by the Court
3 of Appeals requirement that the injury be both tangible, 4 nonspeculative, and direct.

5 THE COURT: Thank you very much.

6 MR. RANSOM: Unless the Court has questions, I will 7 rest.

8 THE COURT: Thank you very much, counsel, for your 9 arguments today. They were very helpful.

10 The Court is going to request that the parties order 11 the transcript and split the cost among them. I'm going to 12 reserve decision on the motion to dismiss, so an opinion will 13 ultimately follow.

14 Are there any other issues that the Court needs to 15 take up today?

16 MR. GOTTLIEB: None for plaintiff, your Honor.

17 MR. RANSOM: No, your Honor.

18 THE COURT: Thank you very much. Court is adjourned.

19 (Adjourned)
20
21
22
23
24
25